A Bibliography on Bhartṛhari

updated June 14th, 2009

by Yves RAMSEIER

The collaboration of anyone interested in bhartṛharian studies, but especially that of the authors of contributions themselves, is needed. Please notify new works, additional references, omissions or errors to the following address:

ramseier.yves@gmail.com

Any other comments, suggestions, critics & c. are most welcome. As I'm updating this bibliography for free, anybody interested in taking the job – for free towards myself – is requested to contact me. It's a call.

The bibliography is divided into three parts:

a) The editions of the Vākyapadīya. The numbering is compatible with that of the bibliography of Wilhelm RAU (1977 and 1988). "W.R." means Wilhelm Rau, obviously.
b) The editions of the Mahābhāṣyadīpikā.
c) The rest, i.e. articles, studies, translations and book reviews. Some books which edit the text and translate it into any language appear twice.

Internet addresses are given indicatively, as they are known to be anitya, somewhere in between verba volant and scripta manent.

Special thanks are due to all those who actively took part to the updating of this bibliography, they will regognize themselves.

The Delhi Conference proceedings (CHATURVEDI 2009) have been causal in my decision to resume the file. Not only because of the misprints (but also), mainly because I was happy that my work has been taken into consideration.

I believe that these references will be of some use for several decades. As I'm not immortal either, I'm wondering whether a young and passionate scholar, of course a Bhartṛhari scholar, could take the responsability of following roughly the evolution of Bhartṛharian studies in the future. I'm about to give up. New Age is already there – I mean in this bibliography –, it is just a list, with no comment. All my files are at disposal. Thank you in advance.

Best to all of you.
